How can I get to Antiparos?

Antiparos is connected with the much larger island of Paros and boats start from either the main port of Parikia (the trip lasts 30 minutes) or the port of Pounta (there is a boat every 20-30 minutes from 07.00 to 02.00 and the trip lasts 7 minutes).

Paros is connected daily with Athens International Airport, with approximately 3 flights per day, while there is one flight connecting Paros with Thessaloniki.

When it comes to boats and ferries, Paros is connected with the ports of Piraeus, Rafina and Lavrio near Athens, all the islands of Cyclades, as well as Heraklion, Crete, and the Dodecanese during the summer.

The connection with Piraeus is daily, while in summer, ferries and speed boats are also added. Lavrio is connected with an inter-island itinerary, while Rafina can be reached with both types of boats. A speedboat connects Paros with Heraklion, Mykonos and Santorini daily.

There are daily departures and multiple choices towards all the islands of Cyclades. The connection with the eastern Aegean islands and Dodecanese is possible via Siros and Santorini.
